Abstract:

The climate warming of the postglacial has strongly reduced the distribution of cold-adapted Lycaena (Lycaenidae) in lowlands and shifted to higher altitudes where they have survived to the present day. We sampled 203 individuals from mountain areas such as the European middle mountains. We sampled 203 individuals from the species' western distribution (Ardennes) over the species' western distribution. Allozyme and microsatellite polymorphism marker systems revealed a strong genetic differentiation among the analysed populations. Genetic differentiation is more pronounced in allozymes (F_{ST} 0.326) than in microsatellites.

The screenshot displays the Folio web application interface. The top navigation bar includes 'Users', 'Finances', 'Search', and 'Subscriptions Fund'. A search bar is present with the text 'Subscriptions Fund' and '12 search results'. A '+ New' button is visible. The main content area is divided into three columns. The left column contains filter options, each with a checkmark and the word 'Option'. The middle column lists search results, all labeled 'Fund Name', with the first result 'Subscriptions Fund' highlighted. The right column shows details for the selected fund, including 'Basic info' (Name: Subscriptions Fund, External Fund: 21893-52348, Code: LIS, Fund code: 2017-SU-WR-3, Fiscal Period: 00/00/0000 - 00/00/0000) and 'Status' (represented by a bar chart and a pie chart). At the bottom right, there is a 'Summary' section with a notification icon (1), a search bar, and a 'Deactivate' button.

Source Code

The FOLIO platform consists of both server-side and client-side components, and will grow to include library services that run on the platform as modules. Some sample modules are located in folio-sample-modules.

Several repositories in the folio-org GitHub organization host the core project code. Third-party modules may be hosted elsewhere.

A good starting point for understanding the FOLIO code is Okapi – specifically the Okapi Guide and Reference, which introduces the concepts and architecture of the FOLIO platform, and includes installation instructions and examples. Okapi is the central hub for applications running on the FOLIO platform and enables access to other modules in the architecture.

The FOLIO system is made up of the code in several GitHub repositories. Each repository contains the code for a single well-defined element of the system. These repositories fall into three categories:

- server-side elements that provide services and the infrastructure that they run on;
- client-side elements that provide a framework for using those services from a Web browser;
- and a few that fall into neither of these categories.

PLEASE NOTE that this is a technology preview following the release early, release often philosophy. We want your feedback in the form of pull requests and filed issues and general discussion via the collaboration tools.

Welcome to the FOLIO Wiki

Created by Peter Murray, last modified by Paula Sullenger on Aug 03, 2017

This site holds documentation about the FOLIO project in general and the work of the Special Interest Groups.

For more information on the Open Library Environment and the Open Library Foundation and their relationship to FOLIO, see FOLIO Organizational Relationships.

FOLIO Communication Spaces

There are several avenues for keeping up with FOLIO development. Join the community at <https://www.folio.org/> and sign up for the "Community Updates" for a monthly newsletter with updates and events announcements. For a weekly, more detailed, update of activities sign up for the "ole" list at <https://ole-lists.openlibraryfoundation.org/>. You can browse this wiki without signing up but to participate via the wiki you must first sign up for issues.folio.org, then use the same login information here. Details for these and other options may be found on the FOLIO Communication Spaces page.
